

Name:

Evidence - Evaluating Conflict	I have some success.	I can recall details about specific conflicts in history, and the causes of the conflict..	I can evaluate the causes of conflict using specific historical evidence.	Additionally, I can predict potential future conflicts based on existing causes, and/ or draw connections between conflicts based on their causes.

Version #1:

In your opinion, what were the main reasons for the French Revolution? Explain using specific evidence.

- You should consider both long term and short term causes. (Perhaps, you might generate a list of all the possible causes before answering the question.)
- You can write this out in paragraph form, create a pie chart with explanations, a recipe, a flowchart, illustrations with text (like Persepolis), or something else that clearly and complete shows your opinion and the evidence that supports it. (You may type it or use another sheet of paper.)

- e. Problem 3:
- f. Why it is important?

- g. Problem 4:
- h. Why it is important?

4. Now, use the planning and thinking that you've done above to answer the original question: In your opinion, what were the main reasons for the French Revolution? Explain using specific evidence.

- a. You can write this out in paragraph form, create a pie chart with explanations, a recipe, a flowchart, illustrations with text (like Persepolis), or something else that clearly and complete shows your opinion and the evidence that supports it. (You may type it or use another sheet of paper.)
